Inchoate Situations and Extra-Rational Behavior

Chris Winship, Harvard University, Dept. of Sociology

Abstract

How do people make decisions when rationality is not possible? In this paper, I first analyze situations in which rationality is not possible using Gintis’ Beliefs, Preferences, and Constraints model. I then examine how individuals behave when one or more of Gintis’ conditions are not met. I discuss how behavior can be purposeful without having well-defined goals.